

Junior Women's World Team Championships
Canadian Team Historical Records

The Junior Women's World Championship was the last of the mainstream events to be introduced. Indeed, an Individual event was started four years before the Team Championship was first added in 1985. In its early years it was supported by a nucleus of eight nations who were supplemented by other countries on an ad hoc basis. Canada was one of the eight nations, having competed continuously since 1985, and having achieved a best placing of 4th in 1987.
